“With the official celebration of Earth Day taking place yesterday in nearly 200 countries around the world, we are proud to gather today to honor that mission of protecting our environment by recognizing a local business that is passionately committed to organic food, nature and sustainability,” said Congressman Kelly. “The success and growth of Edible Earth Farm was made possible through the dedicated efforts of its founders, its local community bank and the Federal Home Loan Bank of Pittsburgh’s Banking On Business program. This impressive partnership has enabled a small business to flourish while bringing fresh, local food to hundreds of Western Pennsylvania families.”

Joining Congressman Kelly for a ceremonial ribbon-cutting ceremony and tour of the 90-acre farm were owners April and Johnny Parker; Winthrop Watson, President and Chief Executive Officer at FHLBank Pittsburgh; Ray Kaltenbaugh, Chief Executive Officer, Mercer County State Bank; Sheila Sterrett, NWPA Regional Manager for U.S. Senator Pat Toomey; Diane Helbig, District Director for State Senator Michele Brooks; Tedd Nesbit, State Representative; Scott Boyd, Mercer County Commissioner; and Matthew McConnell, Mercer County Commissioner.

“It is a great pleasure to welcome everyone to our farm to celebrate Earth Day as we begin our third growing season in our new location. We are grateful for the support from our partners, staff and community to help us realize our dream of providing families with the healthiest, freshest food,” said April Parker.

“We are thrilled to celebrate the expansion of Edible Earth Farm with Congressman Kelly and everyone here today, and we are privileged to join FHLBank Pittsburgh member Mercer County State Bank in supporting small business growth through the Banking On Business program,” stated Winthrop Watson. “Banking On Business is an important lending program that offers qualified small businesses access to secondary loans that supplement the primary loans made by our member financial institutions.”

Ray Kaltenbaugh added, “It is wonderful to partner with FHLBank Pittsburgh to bring a new small business that will continue to employ our neighbors and support our families in our community. We congratulate Edible Earth Farm and look forward to your continued success.”

Edible Earth Farm benefited from funding provided through the Banking On Business program. This funding supported the relocation and expansion of Edible Earth Farm’s organic farming operation to Sandy Lake, Pennsylvania, in order to provide greater proximity and access to customers, markets and seasonal laborers along the I-79 corridor. Through the financing provided by Mercer County State Bank and the Banking On Business program, Edible Earth Farm doubled its acreage and increased the number of employees on staff. It is anticipated that additional jobs will be created in 2019 as well.

In honor of Earth Day and the mission of Edible Earth Farm, all ceremony attendees received a small plant to take home.
